FRUIT GROWERS HERE TO-NIGHT

Many States Represented in Orchard Men now Touring through the County.

VISITING MANY ORCHARDS

See how Adams County Conducts its Fruit Growing Industry. From here to Virginia.

One hundred fruit growers from Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania are in the orchards of Adams County to-day on an inspection trip. They will spend the night in Gettysburg, take a trip over the battlefield to-morrow morning and then leave for Harper's Ferry and Winchester where they will hold a meeting with Virginia growers.

The party was in Franklin County all day Monday, having visited the orchards in and near Chambersburg and Fayetteville Monday morning. In the afternoon the party visited the orchards of D. M. Wertz at Mont Alto and Quincy, going thence to Smithsburg via Edgemont. They returned to Waynesboro in the evening to spend the night here.

This morning they came by way of Monterey and Jack's Mountain to Fairfield and Cashtown where they were met by thirty Adams County orchard men who accompanied them to H. M. Keller's orchard where an hour's inspection was held. At Arendtsville at noon an appetizing luncheon was served by the Red Cross. This afternoon the Raffensperger orchards were visited and then they went on to Biglerville to see the community packing plant. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in the Biglerville-Bendersville orchard district.

The day's tour comes to a close at the Tyson orchards, with supper served there by the Red Cross. The evening meeting will be held there instead of in the Fruit Growers' Hall at Bendersville, as originally planned. Addresses will be made by Prof. F. H. Fassett, of Mehoppen; C. Arthur Griest, of Guernsey; and Dr. S. W. Fletcher, of State College. Afterward the visitors will come to Gettysburg to spend the night.

An early start will be made on Wednesday morning for a hurried battlefield trip and the journey to Virginia. On Thursday the time will be devoted to the orchards in the vicinity of Martinsburg, W. Va., and on Friday a tour will be made of Berkley county in the state of West Virginia. Saturday there will be another fast trip through Adams County.

This large party is traveling exclusively by automobiles, thirty being together. In the party are Dr. Fletcher and Professors Nixon and Fagan, of the horticultural department of State College.

ON MOTOR TRIP

Miss Jennie Wade and Party of Tourists visits Gettysburg.

Miss Jennie Wade, of Columbus, O., accompanied by her nieces, Mary Wade, of Columbus, and Mrs. Charles Cannon, and little daughter, Mary Elizabeth, of Rio de Janeiro, South America, and two brothers, M. W. and P. G. Wade, of Youngstown, were a party of automobile tourists in Gettysburg to-day. Gettysburg is not only interesting to the Wades on account of the Jennie Wade history of this place, but their father was a soldier at the Battle of Gettysburg with the 'Seventy Fifth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry.

Miss Wade has a photograph studio in Columbus, O., and is active at that profession when at home.

Her brothers, P. G. and M. W., are also photographers in Youngstown, O.

Mrs. Cannon's husband is captain of a signal corps in France and her brother is at Camp Alfred Vail, New Jersey.

From here the Wade party goes to Washington and then continues a two weeks' tour of the eastern camps and cities.

They state that they are unable to find any relationship with the family of Jennie Wade, of Gettysburg fame.

TO CONDUCT THE BIG REGISTRATION

Each of Forty Election Districts of the County to Have its Own Registrar.

ASSESSORS TO GIVE HELP

Local Board Has Everything Ready to Go ahead with Work as soon as New Bill is Passed.

The list of registrars who will list the men of Adams County for military service under the provisions of the pending Manpower Bill, which is now expected to pass, has been completed. The local board has all details of the work ready and all that needs to be done is to know the date and the registration can be effected promptly.

In this registration, which is expected to take men from 18 to 45, the registering will be done at the polling places in the forty election districts of the county. One registrar for each district has been named and the assessor of that borough or township has been selected to assist him.

These assessors are chosen because they are supposed to have a record of every man who is 45 years old or less, and it should be an easy matter to check up and see whether all appear for registration.

The following compose the list of the registrars and their assistants, the first named being the registrar, the second the assessor who will sit with him and give whatever help he can:

Abbottstown, Charles Hafer, Nicholas Carns.

Arendtsville, P. S. Orner, H. A. Smelser.

Bendersville, S. B. Gochnaur, W. B. Delap.

Berwick Twp., Charles Shaffer, H. C. Meckley.

POULTRYMEN'S PICNIC

All are Invited to Attend this Outing in Nearby County.

Frank McGrann, Lancaster, secretary of the Pennsylvania State Poultry Association, invites all the poultrymen of the state to be his guests at a picnic to be held on the beautiful Whatglen Farm, adjoining the Country Club, just outside of Lancaster, on Saturday afternoon, August 24th.

The Goverment's activity for increased poultry production has interested thousands of people in the State of Pennsylvania, to keep a few hens in their back yards who never heretofore kept poultry and at this meeting prominent speakers will be in attendance who will discuss the breeding and rearing of poultry both from a fancy and commercial standpoint.

Mr. McGrann will act as host and refreshments will be served without cost.

SEND IN THE LETTERS

Letters from Adams County's soldier boys overseas are beginning to pour in rapidly since the arrival of the Camp Meade and other outfits on the other side.

The Times is anxious to publish all of these it can get and asks its readers to contribute them.

It is not possible always to publish the letters the day they are received at this office, or the first day thereafter, but they will be printed as soon as possible, and the original letters then returned.

NEW SUGAR FORMS ARE REQUIRED

Cards Go out and Grocers' Record Sheets Take their Place. Now Ready.

Consumers' purchasing records are to supplant the family sugar cards, the Adams County Food Administration announces to-day. The sugar cards will all be lifted at the stores, as the new records are started.

Blanks have been printed and on them the grocer lists each purchaser with address, the sugar on hand at time of making purchase, the number in the family, the pounds purchased, and the date of the transaction. These sheets are made in duplicate and each week will be turned in by the grocers to the Food Administration. It will not be a difficult matter to see whether or not any one is trying to get more sugar than the amount to which they are entitled.

Possibly the only way to beat the system would be to give an assumed name, which would be a most dangerous proceeding and likely a costly one if it were discovered.

A caution is issued on the blanks to all retailers warning them against the sale of sugar to strangers or persons not regular customers of the store. This will stop any effort of people to go from one town to another to lay in additional supplies.

GOT HIS GERMAN BEGGING MERCY

Adam Arndt, here Last Summer after being Four Times Rejected, Tells Story.

LITTLE OVER FIVE FEET

But was Full Match for Enemy Soldier whom he Took into Camp without Any Trouble.

Wounded in action in the big drive on the Marne on July 15 last, Corporal Adam F. Arndt, of Company K, Seventh Infantry, American Expeditionary Forces, France, has written an interesting letter in which he describes his experiences.

Corporal Arndt is a little fellow but full of American pluck. He measures only five feet, one and three-fourths inches, and he tried four times to enlist for service before he was finally accepted. He was only accepted after the enlistment laws had been changed providing that men five feet, one inch, might be accepted for service. The lad will be twenty years old next month. He enlisted at York in July 1917, and was here all last summer.

The letter shows how at least one German acted when confronted by a live little Yank, and goes to prove the news reports that the Heinies are easy once they are cornered. The letter reads as follows:

"I was wounded in the big drive on Monday, July 15, being a very deep wound in the left thigh, although I am getting along fairly good at the present time.

"I was in Paris for several days at the hospital, but yesterday I was sent down here, which is a little farther south of Paris.

"We sure had them on the run, but I could not be with them very long, as they got me about nine hours after they started.

"This was one of the funniest drives I have seen yet. On July 1 we went to the front along the Marne river. We stayed there seven days and not a shot was fired on us. Was then relieved and went to support line for a week, which also was very quiet. But when we went to the reserve line on the night of the 14th we just got in our dugouts when the Boches started a beastly artillery barrage of high explosive shells and gas, in which we lost everything, our wagon, train kitchen, water wagon, ammunition wagon and rations. We were just out of luck for a few hours. Also lost a lot of men in our regiment.

"On the morning after the heavy barrage was over they started to come across the river at our section and did get across, but when we got our men together and got working you ought to see the squareheads go back over hills and valleys, and are going yet. We captured a number of them. I went over the top and got my eye on one, and when I got there he started to cry like a child and said he wanted to go with me, so I turned him over to the company commander, and then he gave him a little information. About nine o'clock I was hit with shrapnel, so this knocked me out going further with the boys.

"I had a hard time of it getting to a dressing station, as shells were flying thick and fast all around me, but I finally got there safe, and was then dressed and sent back to the hospital, and was operated on two days later, and the ether made me a little sick for a few hours.

"I guess I will be here for about six or eight weeks."

From Henry Warthen

Mrs. W. Preston Hull, of Chambersburg street, has received an interesting letter from her brother, Henry H. Warthen, who is senior master engineer in an Engineers' unit, A. E. F. He says:

"Will write you that long promised letter to-day, have been so very busy that I have not had much time for personal obligations. Our duties at present outnumber our capacity two to one, but we are struggling along with the hope that our efforts will, at least, be a small factor in the successful conclusion we hope to attain.

"We are having wonderful weather and Paris with her shady boulevards and parks and Bohemian atmosphere is certainly an ideal spot. I feel fortunate indeed at having landed here after a rocky voyage with an uncertain future glaring me in the face, but I also feel that I am of more service here than any branch I could have entered, as the work is of the

REGISTRATION SATURDAY

If your twenty first birthday falls between June 5th and August 24th, inclusive, you must register at the Court House on Saturday, August 24th.

This registration is not to be confused with that expected later, after the passage of the Manpower Bill, and which will likely include men younger than 21 and older than 31.

The registration this coming Saturday is for men who have become of age since June 5th of this year and includes those whose birthdays fall on Saturday, the 24th.

RUSH REPAIRS ON THE LINCOLN WAY

State Highway Department is Pushing Construction Work with All Possible Speed.

Fifteen rollers and several hundred men are now at work in improving the Lincoln Highway in Pennsylvania, according to an official statement just made by the State Highway Department.

The Pennsylvania State Highway Department is furthering improvements upon the Lincoln Highway at this time under stringent difficulties; materials and men are hard to get, and the heavy traffic upon the road tends to slow up the work of improvement. It is assured, however, that all necessary repairs will be completed by fall. Particular attention is being given to improving the conditions existing in the boroughs along the Lincoln Highway.

A concrete section is being built through Adamsburg, and also through Youngstown Borough. Bids are now open for the construction of a road through Ligonier. Repairs are to be made upon the Highway through Bedford. Needed repairs have been completed in Everett, and the Lincoln Highway has just been resurfaced through Chambersburg. Extensive improvements are being made upon the highway, near Philadelphia, and have been completed upon the route through Coatesville.

A supper was given at the home of the bridegroom. The following guests were present: Mr. and Mrs. Nickey, of Hanover; Mrs. and Miss Horner, Mrs. Adams and daughter, First Sergeant Henry A. Anderson, of Headquarters Co., 326th Battalion; and First Company Cook, R. V. Miller, Co. A, 305th Battalion.

The newly married couple will reside at 7 Stratton street, Gettysburg.

ARM BROKEN TWICE

Crouse where the arm was set. About two months ago, the same arm was broken at the same place and the bandages had just recently been removed.

AT UNION STATION

Western Maryland Trains now Stopping at the Reading.

This morning was the first time the Union depot arrangement was put into effect here and many persons, forgetting about the change, had to make hurried trips between the two stations in order not to miss their trains. The Western Maryland comes in on the main Reading track and follows the old switch past the Hollinger produce house, joining the Western Maryland tracks again at the Washington Hotel stables where a new switch has been installed.

It seems strange to see a train pulling out from the Reading for New Oxford, and Hanover, and then passing by the old Western Maryland without stopping.

FRENCH AGAIN HIT NEW FRONT

Drive in for Two Miles on Ten Mile Line between Oise and Aisne.

BIG RETIREMENT COMING

Germans Must Fall Back. French now within Five Miles of Noyon. Are at Lassigny.

(By Cable)

London, Aug. 20, 1:30 p. m.—The French, attacking this morning on a front of ten miles between the Oise and the Aisne, had advanced to a maximum penetration of two miles at nine o'clock. Reports received this afternoon indicated that the attack was continuing favorably and that more ground was falling to the Allies.

This French attack endangers the whole German line from Soissons eastward. It will be a matter of no surprise if the Germans withdraw at any time to the Chemin des Dames.

More than 500 additional prisoners were taken in this new attack this morning.

Paris, Aug. 20, 10:10 a. m.—The French continue to extend and consolidate their gains on both sides of Noyon. They have penetrated farther in their attacks on Roye and Lassigny, and the latter city is now virtually occupied. The Germans are furiously bombarding this entire region while French artillery is pouring a rain of shells of all kinds and sizes on Noyon.

The French now hold both plateaus, the gateposts of the Oise, and are menacing Noyon seriously. They are within five miles of that city from the south.

With the American Army in France, Aug. 19, night—Continuous fighting between the Americans and the Germans is going on in Fismette, part of which is held by the enemy and part by the Americans.

On the slightest provocation the Boches cut loose with all their machine gun fire, while American sharpshooters are cleaning up the gunners.

London, Aug. 20—More progress made in Flanders is reported by Field Marshal Haig to-day. Four German attacks on our lines at Chaulnes were repulsed, he states.

STATE'S BIG TASK

Pennsylvania Should Register Million and a Quarter Men.

(By Telegraph)

Harrisburg, Aug. 20—Pennsylvania should register 1,250,000 men when the 18-21 and 31-45 draft law becomes effective. Major Murdock stated to-day that to register this number will require the use of 13,000,000 blanks of various kinds. It is one of the largest tasks which has confronted this state.

Washington, Aug. 20—Provost Marshal General Crowder estimates that 158,011 men who have reached the age of 21 years since June 5 and on or before August 24 will be registered on this coming Saturday. Of these he believes fifty per cent or approximately 79,000 men, will be available for Class One lists.

Pennsylvania should have 12,583 according to the estimates made for the various states.

When Bert Weakened

By JOSEPHINE MURPHY

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Every holiday should be arranged to arrive on a Friday," drawled Nathan Ware, a frank antagonist of the life strenuous one Saturday morning. "It's so easy to stretch them over Saturday; and then the blessed Sabbath gives us another day in which to rest. Tomorrow Bert, you and Miss Thornton can have the sport of your lives hunting gray squirrels. The woods are full of them, and if there's any better fun than chasing squirrels, I don't know what it is—unless making love to a pretty girl beats it.

"You and Miss Thornton got along famously today," teased Nathan. "If you and Dora aren't to be congratulated before leaving here Sunday, Phebe Ware is going to be the most disappointed woman in America."

"Really?" laughed Bert. "Your wife is a dear, but—" He hesitated, smiling.

"She'll be after me soon if I don't go out and join her," said Nathan, rising and placing his hand on his friend's shoulder. "Hope the 'but' is not serious, Bert. Miss Thornton is a brick and she likes you. Good night. Have your smoke out, and if there's anything you want and can't find, why—keep on looking for it, or spring the burglar alarm."

It had been a day full of pleasure for the little house party at Ware's place—"a bungalow 14 miles from the city and a million miles from vexation."

The evening before as they sat in the library, various topics had been discussed, chief of which were, "woman's rights." A charming exponent of this subject had been Dora Thornton, and thus the thorn that pricked the love and admiration of Bert. Yet the former day-dreams of a clear-headed bachelor held no vision such as this.

It was the creature of another world that appeared in his dreams—a girl, gentle, home-loving and dependable. Now in the fairy smoke circles that floated from his cigar, another form is visible: a girl, muscular, brown-armed and alert; who paddles a canoe like an Indian, and whose archery and rifle scores are among the best; yet possessing none of those soft feminine traits which the average man admires most in a woman.

Bert threw the end of his cigar into the fire and mounted the stairs to his room. Half an hour later, hesitating between accusing himself of being either a prig or an idiot, he fell asleep.

Saturday morning dawned clear and beautiful. An early coach brought several more to the little house-party.

"Sorry I haven't another rifle, Phil," said Ware to a shooting guest; "you might catch up with Bert and Miss Thornton and catch some squirrels."

"We saw Dora and Bert as we came over the hill," said Alice Bates.

"And a jolly time they seemed to be having all by themselves," said Phil. "I whistled, but they were too busy to hear me."

"Guess they'll come back squirrelless. It's dollars to doughnuts Bert wouldn't see a squirrel if he fell over one. However, we won't blame him under the circumstances"—remarked Ware.

He was mistaken, for just about this time Bert had caught sight of the first squirrel, a fat gray one, which bounded to a tall chestnut tree a hundred feet away.

"I see the rascal," he said. "Stand here, Miss Thornton. Look up between those two branches. Do you see him?"

"You don't mean that brownish excrescence on the bark?"

"That's the chap."

"I don't believe it."

"Try him with a shot and you'll see. Squirrels were not behind the door when protective coloring was handed out in the animal kingdom. Steady now."

The girl's lips closed firmly. Then a muffled report was heard.

"You've got him!" exclaimed Bert.

The squirrel's clutch on the bark slowly relaxed and he fell.

Bert went over and picked up the yet quivering creature.

"What a beauty!" he cried. "It was a splendid shot."

As he approached the girl she shrank from him. He put the fluffy animal into the pocket of his hunting jacket.

"Dora, dear," he said, placing his hand tenderly on her shoulder.

"Don't," she cried, passionately.

"I'm a brute."

"Oh, what a cruel thing to do! The poor, harmless little fellow. Oh, how could I?" Here her voice broke in a sob, as she leaned against a tree and wept, her head buried in her hands. Gently, Bert unwound the fingers that held her rifle.

"Shall we walk on?" he said.

Slowly they walked through the woods, and Bert, uncertain no longer of his love, spoke of a subject nearer and dearer than any other. In truth, squirrels scampered beneath their very feet unseen. Before long the girl's countenance had changed to one of happiness, and her eyes shone with a new brilliancy, that spoke well for the satisfaction of bright, matchmaking, Phebe Ware.

Prudent Consideration.

"There's young Buffins, who is a promising young man. Why don't you take him in with you on this?"

"Because I doubt the wisdom of taking in a promising young man on a strictly paying enterprise."

COLD LUNCHES WRECKED HIS SYSTEM, NOW REJOICES OVER TONALL

Continually eating cold lunches wrecked his digestive system says Charles S. Schery, of 235 East Gas Avenue, New York, Pa. "My stomach had been giving me quite some trouble for the last few years, and it mattered not how little I ate or what I ate, it did not taste right and I would rift it up after eating. I felt worn out in the mornings; it seemed my rest did me no good. I was losing weight right along and my ambition was fast dwindling away. I felt as though I did not care whether I worked or not. I really was fast becoming a miserable wreck due to a disordered stomach.

"A friend of mine, Charles G. Selmeyer, recommended Tonall to me. He claimed it did his so much good. I at once commenced taking Tonall and the results have been most gratifying. I enjoy what I eat now, and my wife can vouch for the amount I do eat. I feel as though my whole system has been repaired."

TONALL is sold at People's Drug Store, Gettysburg, and Ed. T. Auker, New Oxford.

FRUIT GROWERS HERE TO-NIGHT

Many States Represented in Orchard Men now Touring through the County.

VISITING MANY ORCHARDS

See how Adams County Conducts its Fruit Growing Industry. From here to Virginia.

One hundred fruit growers from Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania are in the orchards of Adams County to-day on an inspection trip. They will spend the night in Gettysburg, take a trip over the battlefield to-morrow morning and then leave for Harper's Ferry and Winchester where they will hold a meeting with Virginia growers.

The party was in Franklin County all day Monday, having visited the orchards in and near Chambersburg and Fayetteville Monday morning. In the afternoon the party visited the orchards of D. M. Wertz at Mont Alto and Quincy, going thence to Smithsburg via Edgemont. They returned to Waynesboro in the evening to spend the night here.

This morning they came by way of Monterey and Jack's Mountain to Fairfield and Cashtown where they were met by thirty Adams County orchard men who accompanied them to H. M. Keller's orchard where an hour's inspection was held. At Arendtsville at noon an appetizing luncheon was served by the Red Cross. This afternoon the Raffensperger orchards were visited and then they went on to Bigierville to see the community packing plant. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in the Biglerville-Bendersville orchard district.

The day's tour comes to a close at the Tyson orchards, with supper served there by the Red Cross. The evening meeting will be held there instead of in the Fruit Growers' Hall at Bendersville, as originally planned. Addresses will be made by Prof. F. H. Fassett, of Mehoppen; C. Arthur Griest, of Guernsey; and Dr. S. W. Fletcher, of State College. Afterward the visitors will come to Gettysburg to spend the night.

An early start will be made on Wednesday morning for a hurried battlefield trip and the journey to Virginia. On Thursday the time will be devoted to the orchards in the vicinity of Martinsburg, W. Va., and on Friday a tour will be made of Berkley county in the state of West Virginia. Saturday there will be another fast trip through Adams County.

This large party is traveling exclusively by automobiles, thirty being together. In the party are Dr. Fletcher and Professors Nixon and Fagan, of the horticultural department of State College.

ON MOTOR TRIP

Miss Jennie Wade and Party of Tourists visits Gettysburg.

Miss Jennie Wade, of Columbus, O., accompanied by her nieces, Mary Wade, of Columbus, and Mrs. Charles Cannon, and little daughter, Mary Elizabeth, of Rio de Janeiro, South America, and two brothers, M. W. and P. G. Wade, of Youngstown, were a party of automobile tourists in Gettysburg to-day. Gettysburg is not only interesting to the Wades on account of the Jennie Wade history of this place, but their father was a soldier at the Battle of Gettysburg with the Seventy Fifth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry.

Miss Wade has a photograph studio in Columbus, O., and is active at that profession when at home.

Her brothers, P. G. and M. W., are also photographers in Youngstown, O.

Mrs. Cannon's husband is captain of a signal corps in France and her brother is at Camp Alfred Vail, New Jersey.

From here the Wade party goes to Washington and then continues a two weeks' tour of the eastern camps and cities.

They state that they are unable to find any relationship with the family of Jennie Wade, of Gettysburg fame.

TO CONDUCT THE BIG REGISTRATION

Each of Forty Election Districts of the County to Have its Own Registrar.

ASSESSORS TO GIVE HELP

Local Board Has Everything Ready to Go ahead with Work as soon as New Bill is Passed.

The list of registrars who will list the men of Adams County for military service under the provisions of the pending Manpower Bill, which is now expected to pass, has been completed. The local board has all details of the work ready and all that needs to be done is to know the date and the registration can be effected promptly.

In this registration, which is expected to take men from 18 to 45, the registering will be done at the polling places in the forty election districts of the county. One registrar for each district has been named and the assessor of that borough or township has been selected to assist him.

These assessors are chosen because they are supposed to have a record of every man who is 45 years old or less, and it should be an easy matter to check up and see whether all appear for registration.

The following compose the list of the registrars and their assistants, the first named being the registrar, the second the assessor who will sit with him and give whatever help he can:

Abbottstown, Charles Hafer, Nicholas Carns.

Arendtsville, P. S. Orner, H. A. Smelser.

Bendersville, S. B. Gochnaur, W. B. Delap.

POULTRYMEN'S PICNIC

All are Invited to Attend this Outing in Nearby County.

Frank, McGrann, Lancaster, secretary of the Pennsylvania State Poultry Association, invites all the poultrymen of the state to be his guests at a picnic to be held on the beautiful Whatglen Farm, adjoining the Country Club, just outside of Lancaster, on Saturday afternoon, August 24th.

The Goversment's activity for increased poultry production has interested thousands of people in the State of Pennsylvania, to keep a few hens in their back yards who never heretofore kept poultry and at this meeting prominent speakers will be in attendance who will discuss the breeding and rearing of poultry both from a fancy and commercial standpoint.

Mr. McGrann will act as host and refreshments will be served without cost.

SEND IN THE LETTERS

Letters from Adams County's soldier boys overseas are beginning to pour in rapidly since the arrival of the Camp Meade and other outfits on the other side.

The Times is anxious to publish all of these it can get and asks its readers to contribute them.

It is not possible always to publish the letters the day they are received at this office, or the first day thereafter, but they will be printed as soon as possible, and the original letters then returned.

NEW SUGAR FORMS ARE REQUIRED

Cards Go out and Grocers' Record Sheets Take their Place. Now Ready.

Consumers' purchasing records are to supplant the family sugar cards, the Adams County Food Administration announces to-day. The sugar cards will all be lifted at the stores, as the new records are started.

Blanks have been printed and on them the grocer lists each purchaser with address, the sugar on hand at time of making purchase, the number in the family, the pounds purchased, and the date of the transaction. These sheets are made in duplicate and each week will be turned in by the grocers to the Food Administration. It will not be a difficult matter to see whether or not any one is trying to get more sugar than the amount to which they are entitled.

Possibly the only way to beat the system would be to give an assumed name, which would be a most dangerous proceeding and likely a costly one if it were discovered.

A caution is issued on the blanks to all retailers warning them against the sale of sugar to strangers or persons not regular customers of the store. This will stop any effort of people to go from one town to another to lay in additional supplies.

GOT HIS GERMAN BEGGING MERCY

Adam Arndt, here Last Summer after being Four Times Rejected, Tells Story.

LITTLE OVER FIVE FEET

But was Full Match for Enemy Soldier whom he Took into Camp without Any Trouble.

Wounded in action in the big drive on the Marne on July 15 last, Corporal Adam F. Arndt, of Company K, Seventh Infantry, American Expeditionary Forces, France, has written an interesting letter in which he describes his experiences.

Corporal Arndt is a little fellow but full of American pluck. He measures only five feet, one and three-fourths inches, and he tried four times to enlist for service before he was finally accepted. He was only accepted after the enlistment laws had been changed providing that men five feet, one inch, might be accepted for service. The lad will be twenty years old next month. He enlisted at York in July 1917 and was here all last summer.

The letter shows how at least one German acted when confronted by a live little Yank, and goes to prove the news reports that the Heinies are easy once they are cornered. The letter reads as follows:

"I was wounded in the big drive on Monday, July 15, being a very deep wound in the left thigh, although I am getting along fairly good at the present time.

"I was in Paris for several days at the hospital, but yesterday I was sent down here, which is a little farther south of Paris.

"We sure had them on the run, but I could not be with them very long, as they got me about nine hours after they started.

"This was one of the funniest drives I have seen yet. On July 1 we went to the front along the Marne river. We stayed there seven days and not a shot was fired on us. Was then relieved and went to support line for a week, which also was very quiet. But when we went to the reserve line on the night of the 14th we just got in our dugouts when the Boches started a beastly artillery barrage of high explosive shells and gas, in which we lost everything, our wagon, train kitchen, water wagon, ammunition wagon and rations. We were just out of luck for a few hours. Also lost a lot of men in our regiment.

"On the morning after the heavy barrage was over they started to come across the river at our section and did get across, but when we got our men together and got working you ought to see the squareheads go back over hills and valleys, and are going yet. We captured a number of them. I went over the top and got my eye on one, and when I got there he started to cry like a child and said he wanted to go with me, so I turned him over to the company commander, and then he gave him a little information. About nine o'clock I was hit with shrapnel, so this knocked me out going further with the boys.

"I had a hard time of it getting to a dressing station, as shells were flying thick and fast all around me, but I finally got there safe, and was then dressed and sent back to the hospital, and was operated on two days later, and the ether made me a little sick for a few hours.

"I guess I will be here for about six or eight weeks."

From Henry Warthen

Mrs. W. Preston Hull, of Chambersburg street, has received an interesting letter from her brother, Henry H. Warthen, who is senior master engineer in an Engineers' unit, A. E. F. He says:

"Will write you that long promised letter to-day, have been so very busy that I have not had much time for personal obligations. Our duties at present outnumber our capacity two to one, but we are struggling along with the hope that our efforts will, at least, be a small factor in the successful conclusion we hope to attain.

"We are having wonderful weather and Paris with her shady boulevards and parks and Bohemian atmosphere is certainly an ideal spot. I feel fortunate indeed at having landed here after a rocky voyage with an uncertain future glaring me in the face, but I also feel that I am of more service here than any branch I could have entered, as the work is of the

If your twenty first birthday falls between June 5th and August 24th, inclusive, you must register at the Court House on Saturday, August 24th.

This registration is not to be confused with that expected later, after the passage of the Manpower Bill, and which will likely include men younger than 21 and older than 31.

The registration this coming Saturday is for men who have become of age since June 5th of this year and includes those whose birthdays fall on Saturday, the 24th.

RUSH REPAIRS ON THE LINCOLN WAY

State Highway Department is Pushing Construction Work with All Possible Speed.

Fifteen rollers and several hundred men are now at work in improving the Lincoln Highway in Pennsylvania, according to an official statement just made by the State Highway Department.

The Pennsylvania State Highway Department is furthering improvements upon the Lincoln Highway at this time under stringent difficulties; materials and men are hard to get, and the heavy traffic upon the road tends to slow up the work of improvement. It is assured, however, that all necessary repairs will be completed by fall. Particular attention is being given to improving the conditions existing in the boroughs along the Lincoln Highway.

A concrete section is being built through Adamsburg, and also through Youngstown Borough. Bids are now open for the construction of a road through Ligonier. Repairs are to be made upon the Highway through Bedford. Needed repairs have been completed in Everett, and the Lincoln Highway has just been resurfaced through Chambersburg. Extensive improvements are being made upon the highway, near Philadelphia, and have been completed upon the route through Coatesville.

MUMPER—NICKEY

A quiet wedding took place at St. Francis Xavier rectory on Saturday evening when Miss Catherine Nickey, of Hanover, was married to Fred L. Mumper, of Gettysburg, by Rev. W. F. Boyle.

A supper was given at the home of the bridegroom. The following guests were present: Mr. and Mrs. Nickey, of Hanover; Mrs. and Miss Horner, Mrs. Adams and daughter, First Sergeant Henry A. Anderson, of Headquarters Co., 326th Battalion; and First Company Cook, R. V. Miller, Co. A, 305th Battalion.

The newly married couple will reside at 7 Stratton street, Gettysburg.

Crouse where the arm was set. About two months ago, the same arm was broken at the same place and the bandages had just recently been removed.

AT UNION STATION

Western Maryland Trains now Stopping at the Reading.

This morning was the first time the Union depot arrangement was put into effect here and many persons, forgetting about the change, had to make hurried trips between the two stations in order not to miss their trains. The Western Maryland comes in on the main Reading track and follows the old switch past the Hollinger produce house, joining the Western Maryland tracks again at the Washington Hotel stables where a new switch has been installed.

It seems strange to see a train pulling out from the Reading for New Oxford, and Hanover, and then passing by the old Western Maryland without stopping.

FRENCH AGAIN HIT NEW FRONT

Drive in for Two Miles on Ten Mile Line between Oise and Aisne.

BIG RETIREMENT COMING

Germans Must Fall Back. French now within Five Miles of Noyon. Are at Lassigny.

(By Cable)

London, Aug. 20, 1:30 p. m.—The French, attacking this morning on a front of ten miles between the Oise and the Aisne, had advanced to a maximum penetration of two miles at nine o'clock. Reports received this afternoon indicated that the attack was continuing favorably and that more ground was falling to the Allies.

This French attack endangers the whole German line from Soissons eastward. It will be a matter of no surprise if the Germans withdraw at any time to the Chemin des Dames.

More than 500 additional prisoners were taken in this new attack this morning.

Paris, Aug. 20, 10:10 a. m.—The French continue to extend and consolidate their gains on both sides of Noyon. They have penetrated farther in their attacks on Roye and Lassigny, and the latter city is now virtually occupied. The Germans are furiously bombarding this entire region while French artillery is pouring a rain of shells of all kinds and sizes on Noyon.

The French now hold both plateaus, the gateposts of the Oise, and are menacing Noyon seriously. They are within five miles of that city from the south.

With the American Army in France, Aug. 19, night—Continuous fighting between the Americans and the Germans is going on in Fismette, part of which is held by the enemy and part by the Americans.

On the slightest provocation the Boches cut loose with all their machine gun fire, while American sharpshooters are cleaning up the gunners.

London, Aug. 20—More progress made in Flanders is reported by Field Marshal Haig to-day. Four German attacks on our lines at Chaulnes were repulsed, he states.

STATE'S BIG TASK

Pennsylvania Should Register Million and a Quarter Men.

(By Telegraph)

Harrisburg, Aug. 20—Pennsylvania should register 1,250,000 men when the 18-21 and 31-45 draft law becomes effective. Major Murdock stated to-day that to register this number will require the use of 13,000,000 blanks of various kinds. It is one of the largest tasks which has confronted this state.

Washington, Aug. 20—Provost Marshal General Crowder estimates that 158,011 men who have reached the age of 21 years since June 5 and on or before August 24 will be registered on this coming Saturday. Of these he believes fifty per cent or approximately 79,000 men, will be available for Class One lists.

Pennsylvania should have 13,583 according to the estimates made for the various states.

THROW FOE BACK ON THREE FRONTS

French and Western Outskirts of Lassigny. Pimrez has been Taken.

BRITISH ENTER MERVILLE

Gain on Wide Front. Also Reported at Roye. Desperate German Attack Enters Lines.

London, Aug. 20—The Germans on three important sectors of the western battlefront have been compelled to give up positions of great strategic value under the onslaughts of the British and French troops.

In the Lys sector, east of Amiens, the enemy has retreated over a front of nearly six miles, leaving the town of Merville in British hands. Between the Matz and Oise Rivers the French have fought their way to the western outskirts of the dominating position of Lassigny and farther south in this hill and wooded region have debouched Thiescourt Wood and also captured the town of Pimprez, situated in the Oise Valley, on the Noyon-Compiegne road.

Around the curve in the battleline northwest of Soissons the French from near Carlepont to Fontenoy, on the Aisne, a distance of approximately nine miles, have driven back the enemy to an average depth of more than a mile and captured several villages and 2,200 prisoners.

Unofficial reports record the capture by the British of the railway station on the western outskirts of the important town of Roye, one of the pivotal points on the battlefront between the Somme and the Oise, but there is no official confirmation of this.

The gains in the new operations are most important ones for the Allies, for, aside from wide areas over which the enemy has been compelled to acknowledge defeat, the weakening in the German defense is becoming daily more noticeable and apparently within a short time they probably will be forced to commence a retrograde movement on a scale that will mean the entire blotting out of old lines and the taking up of new ones to the east and southeast, possibly from the region of Rheims to Ypres.

The Lys salient is fast fading away under the attacks of the British and the voluntary retirement of the Germans to new defense positions eastward and seemingly the big westward bulge into the Allied line between Ypres and La Bassee soon must disappear. Under the new gains of the British around Roye and particularly those made by the French from Lassigny to the Oise Valley and northwest of Soissons, the Germans now are in a bad predicament. Here their positions are dominated by the Allied guns from the west, southwest and south for many miles and apparently a retreat eastward across the plains of Picardy and over the Somme and even from the Western Aisne will be necessitated.

The latest German official communication asserts that French attacks between the Oise and Aisne, delivered over a wide front, failed, but the French War Office statement is specific in announcing the penetration of the environs of Lassigny, the cutting of a passage way through the Thiescourt Wood and the capture of Pimprez. That there has been hard fighting, however, is indicated by the British official statement, which says that northwest of Chaulnes the Germans succeeded in penetrating the British lines at several points, but later were driven out.

With the American Army on the Vesle Front, Aug. 20—The Americans and French increased their grip on their holdings north of the Vesle River at several points early Monday morning by slight infantry advances. The maneuvers were carried out without encountering any Germans.

West of Baroches the Germans sent out patrols, but these were pushed back by the Americans.

The French and Americans Sunday began operating the biggest guns they have used since they reached the Vesle. These heavy guns are blazing away at the Aisne River region and beyond it, where aerial observers have reported that the Germans are concentrating supplies.

No Mistaking His Meaning.

Smith was taking his friend out for a drive. The car had the jumps. It balked and bucked and bounced along unsteadily, greatly to the friend's discomfort. They turned into a park boulevard and the friend noted a sign at the side of the road. "Smith, you better not drive on this road," said the friend. "Why?" asked Smith. "Well, that sign says 'Pleasure cars only.'"

WAR CROSSES FOR BRAVE AMERICANS

Pershing Reports Number of them Showing Fine Spirit in Action.

Washington, Aug. 20—Award of the Distinguished Service Cross to three officers and four men for gallant conduct at the front was announced in General Pershing's communique for Sunday. It follows:

"Headquarters, American Expeditionary Forces, August 18, 1918.

"Section A—Aside from artillery activity and fruitless hostile raids in the Vosges there is nothing to report.

"Section B—The commander-in-chief has awarded Distinguished Service Crosses to the following members of the American Expeditionary Forces for the acts of gallantry set forth after their names:

"Second lieutenant Carl C. Rice, machine gun battalion—In command of a machine gun section on June 6, 1918, near Chateau Thierry, France, he was wounded soon after the advance began, but refused to have his wounds dressed for fear it would delay the movement. He bravely continued to lead the section until he fell from exhaustion.

"Private Theodore Pisticoudis, machine gun battalion—When three infantrymen were buried by a shell explosion near Chateau Thierry, June 6, 1918, he fearlessly left shelter in face of a heavy shelling and rescued them.

"First Lieutenant H. C. Molesberry, engineers—In the vicinity of Le Thiolet on the night of June 6-7, 1918, he courageously took command of and efficiently directed the advance of an infantry unit when all its officers had been killed or wounded.

"Private Jefferson Holt, medical detachment, engineers, and Private Charles Raffington, medical detachment, engineers—During the day and night of June 2-3, 1918, they exposed themselves to severe and continuous fire beyond call of duty in order to bring aid to wounded engineers and marines.

"First Lieutenant Charles C. Rentfro, infantry—For three days, July 15 to 18, 1918, before St. Agnan, France, he went without sleep in order to care for the wounded and performed his work fearlessly without shelter under continuous bombardment.

"Private George W. Holly, infantry—On the night of June 23, 1918, near Baccarat, France, he attempted to catch a hand grenade thrown into the window of his dugout by a German and did succeed in diverting it and thereby saving from death or injury a number of his comrades, but in the effort lost most of his hand."

ARMY GRAFTER TO PRISON

President Wilson Approves Sentence of Lieut. Frank.

Washington, Aug. 20—Sentence of dismissal from the Army and five years' imprisonment at hard labor, imposed upon First Lieutenant Milo O. Frank, at Camp Sheridan, Ala., has been approved by President Wilson. Lieutenant Frank was convicted of having conspired with another officer in making a fraudulent claim against the government for $1,000, purporting to be for supplies delivered to the camp.

President Wilson at the same time commuted the sentence of dismissal upon Capt. Stewart D. Tiffany, 105th Infantry, for violating a quarantine order at Camp Stuart, Va., to confinement at his post for six months and forfeiture of $300 in pay.

EAT ALL-WHEAT BREAD

American Army in France Amply Supplied.

Washington, Aug. 20—The American Army in France is amply supplied with bread made of all-wheat flour, the War Department announced, and the daily ration of 18 ounces of flour for soft bread so over-abundant that a reduction to 16 ounces a day is now under consideration.

Soldiers while in the United States consume Victory bread with the prescribed amount of substitutes for wheat flour. Not until they get to France are they allowed all-wheat bread.

Field bakers must work swiftly and cannot afford to experiment with new flour mixtures.

A mob of 4,000 persons attacked stores and set fire to many houses in the city of Kofu, capital of the Prefecture of Yamashina, according to an official statement issued. Rioters, policemen and a soldier were wounded.

ENEMY SNEAKS INTO NEW YORK

Officer of U-Boat Said to have been Recognized in Saloon there.

MAKES HURRIED ESCAPE

German Submarines may have Landed Others. Two Cables were Cut, but now Repaired.

Washington, Aug. 20—Information furnished by officers of vessels attacked by German submarines along the American Coast has strengthened the belief held by several experienced officials here that the enemy raiders have had communication with persons on shore and may even have landed members of their crews in an effort to secure reliable information. The Navy Department officially refused to endorse this belief, though admitting the possibility.

Positive claim that he met an officer from the submarine that sunk the oil tank steamer O. B. Jennings in a New York saloon is made by the first officer of that vessel, according to a story reaching the department. The recognition between the American and German is said to have been instantaneous, the latter making his escape when the American appealed to a brother officer accompanying him for confirmation of his belief.

Other instances have been heard, not so well substantiated, of the discovery of evidence that German submarines have been in close touch with the shore. One story along this line was that the captain of a coastwise vessel being ordered to the submarine with his papers was astounded to see on the deck of the German U-boat copies of New York papers of the same date.

Communication between the raiders and the mainland is possible at scores of places along the Atlantic Shore, naval officials believe, the irregularity of the American coast at certain points making such a thing possible.

Recently the precautions taken by the authorities to prevent such communication have been greatly augmented, both by shore patrol and other methods which cannot be discussed. It can be stated, however, that no official report has been made giving any definite evidence of an enemy boat having landed.

From authoritative sources it was learned that there is reason to believe that three German submarines have been operating off the American coasts, at three separate points. Two of these have recently "ceased operating", either because their stores have become exhausted or as a result of damage received in contact with the patrol fleets. It is known that the activities of one boat ceased immediately after a destroyer reported having discharged depth bombs near the spot where the U-boat submerged.

One of the three submarines, it is considered certain, was especially equipped for duty as a cable-cutter. This is held to explain the sudden parting recently of two Atlantic cables. A naval repair ship, escorted by fighting craft, since has picked up and spliced both cables.

Descriptions of the submarines operating in American waters almost without exception give their length as 300 feet and their armament as two guns of either 5.7 or 5.9 inch caliber. Naval experts adduce from other information that the enemy craft have a cruising radius of not less than 17,000 miles.

The German Admiralty now has in commission between 160 and 180 submarines, while the total number destroyed by the Allies has passed the 200 mark, according to the most reliable information available here. If correct, these figures would indicate that new German construction has barely held its own over the period of four years, as at the beginning of the war the Germans are known to have had about 150 submarines. The toll in the last six months, however, has been many times that attained in any previous period, and the constantly increasing Allied antisubmarine forces, according to naval officials, will put the ratio continually higher as time passes.

PREPARE TO PUT THROUGH DRAFT

Senate and House Ready to Pass Measure without Delay. Some Explanations.

Washington, Aug. 20—Congress prepared Monday to enact quickly the manpower legislation, extending the draft age limits to 18 and 45 years, for the American military program which General March, chief of staff, told the House Military Committee, should win the war in 1919.

While the House Committee began work on the bill by hearing General March, Secretary Baker and Provost Marshal General Crowder, the Senate set aside its summer vacation agreement in order to take up the measure Thursday. It appeared probable that the bill would be debated simultaneously in the Senate and the House the last of the week and passed soon thereafter. Senate prohibition advocates agreed to temporarily lay aside the national prohibition bill and give the manpower program the right of way.

Before the House Committee, Secretary Baker and his aides again urged action on the bill, discussing various phases of the enlarged program which calls for an army of nearly 4,000,000 Americans in France by June 30, 1919, with another 1,000,000 in training in this country.

Predicting that the war will be won or lost on the western front, regardless of what happens elsewhere, General March told the committee that with 80 trained American divisions of about 45,000 men each, in France, under an American commander, victory ought to rest on American arms next year. Reiterating his belief that such a force could go through the German lines at will, General March went further and electrified the committeemen by declaring such a force "should bring the war to a successful conclusion in 1919."

Suggestions that the 5,000,000 Army program would exhaust American manpower were laughingly denied by General March, but he joined Secretary Baker in explaining that it represents America's maximum effort for the present.

The Secretary told the committee that his previous statement of the department's intention to liberalize the draft regulations in dealing with the older men to be made subject to call had been misconstrued. He said there was no intention to exempt married men as a class and that married men who do not support their wives or are not engaged in useful occupations will be called as they now are

OUR AVIATORS GET MANY HUN PLANES

Total of Fifty Nine Enemy Aircraft Brought down by Four Squadrons.

With the American Army in France, Aug. 20—Statistics covering the activities of the first American pursuit group of aviators up to August 1, comprising only four of the American squadrons now in operation, show in a striking way the strides made by American aviators since the United States entered the war.

The figures show that no less than 50 aviators are officially credited with downing anywhere from one to five planes. Seventeen machines are credited to the late Raoul Lufbery.

In actual numbers the German machines downed total 59, exclusive of those of Lufbery, but they are divided officially among nearly twice that number of men because on numerous occasions several fliers participate in a battle.

The aviators with five victories are Lieutenants Campbell, Rickenbacker, MacArthur, O'Neill; those with four each are Captain Peterson, Lieutenant Meissner; those with three each are Lieutenants Mitchel, O. P. Porter, Simonds, Jones and Healy. Fourteen others have two victories each, and 32 more, including the late Lieut. Quentin Roosevelt, are credited with one each.

These figures do not include the records of other squadrons, which have been even more successful.

BIDDLE DOWNED PLANE

Pennsylvanian Killed Observer and Wounded Pilot.

Washington, Aug. 20—Captain Charles J. Biddle, of Andalusia, was the American aviator who brought down a German airplane in the Lorraine, mentioned in General Pershing's official communique August 17. Additional details are contained in section B of the communique, for that day, made public to-day. It follows:

"Section B—The following details of the aerial combat referred to in section A have been reached in Lorraine.

"Captain Biddle brought down a Rumpler machine northwest of Bouxieres-aux-Dames at 5:40 o'clock in the afternoon of August 16. The observer was killed and the pilot wounded, but the machine landed intact."

STEAMER SAN JOSE SUNK

Members of the Crew Landed at Boston with British Captain.

Boston, Aug. 20—Captain David Evans, of the British steamer Penistone, who was taken aboard a German submarine as a prisoner of war after the undersea boat sank his vessel off Nantucket last week, was landed here late yesterday. With Captain Evans were eight members of the crew of the Norwegian steamer San Jose, also a victim of the same submarine that destroyed the Penistone.

Captain Evans, who had been kept prisoner on the submarine eight days, was put into one of the San Jose's small boats which was picked up later by a government vessel.

Twenty five other members of the San Jose's crew had not been accounted for. Naval authorities refused to give out anything concerning the experiences of Captain Evans or the sinking of the San Jose.

Captain Evans appeared little the worse for his adventures. He was seized by the German commander when he tried to return to his sinking vessel for the ship's papers.

VIENNA CITY OF THIEVES

Clothes Favorite Booty of Robbers Because of Shortage.

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 20—Public insecurity is greatly increased at Vienna because of the war, according to a traveler who has just returned to Switzerland from the Austrian capital. Thefts are reported every night, the thieves being especially anxious to obtain clothes, the price of which has risen fabulously.

A presentable suit for a man costs from 1,500 to 2,000 crowns. Shoes are worth 300 crowns and a pound of bread, bought secretly without a card, costs from 12 to 15 crowns.

On the other hand, the ordinary worker is earning from 400 to 500 crowns a week, and often more. As a result ordinary ironworkers and coal carriers are seen drinking champagne at fashionable bars. Coopers are greatly needed in view of the excellent harvests in the wine districts. Hungarian vineyard owners are offering master coopers 80,000 crowns per year.

Expert at Tribal Sport.

One method the Zuni practice for keeping in trim is their tribal sport, which was witnessed for the first time by a number of Americans at the recent ceremonies. The game is known as "kick-the-stick," and is a sort of hockey played with the bare feet. The stick is a bit of wood three or four inches long, and each team tries to kick it down a long course to a goal. So expert are the players and so fast do they travel, that a number of spectators wore out their horses trying to keep up with the game.

French Medical Professor Urges Use of New Ingredient in Making Bread.

Paris.—Doctor Labesse, professor in the medical school at Angers, urges the use of chestnuts in bread.

Chestnuts, which used to be sold in profusion in the streets of Paris, have disappeared from the market, he points out, and says a considerable saving in potatoes and wheat could be effected by using them in bread, according to a recipe which was demonstrated before the Academy of Sciences as long ago as 1861.

Truly a Skeptical Judge.

Complete burglar's kit was found in the possession of a man living in Melbourne, Australia. When arraigned in court the man explained that he had found the pliers in a drawer in his lodgings, that he had picked up a lot of percussion caps in the park, and that he used the electric torch found in his possession to read at night. He seemed quite astonished when an unbelieving magistrate sentenced him to six months' imprisonment.

YORK COUNTY

PASTOR FOR 17 YEARS THERE

Rev. U. E. Apple, pastor of Grace Lutheran church, Red Lion, since 1901, who has accepted a call to a Mechanicsburg, Cumberland County, charge, preached his farewell sermon Sunday evening to a crowded auditorium, and it was very affecting. His text was taken from Corinthians 1:3-7, "Neither is he that planteth anything, nor he that watereth; but God that giveth the increase."

The church has been remodeled twice during Rev. Mr. Apple's pastorate. The property was worth about $2,000 when he took charge; to-day the valuation is $20,000. There was also built a $15,000 church at Freysville, where he preached. Both churches are free of debt.

The membership of the Red Lion church was 35 in 1901. It has increased to 265.

FOUR BANDS WILL PLAY

Workmen began on the new exhibition building, Stewartstown, being erected by the Agricultural association to take the place of tents, on last Tuesday. Joseph Ziegler has charge of the work which is progressing nicely. Four well known bands will furnish music for the fair, on Wednesday, Potosi band; Thursday, Old Conewago band; Friday, Shrewsbury band, and Saturday, Loganville band.

A special feature will be the tent devoted to relics of the world war, consisting of German helmets, guns, swords and other interesting articles, which will be under the auspices of the thrift stamp committee.

A display of fireworks will be given on Wednesday night.

PRONG PENETRATES SCALP

Thursday afternoon Floyd Messersmith, the 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Messersmith, Stewartstown, had a fork prong run in his scalp when he was in the wheat mow at the home of his uncle, Marvin Hershey, Hopewell township, just north of there. One of the workmen who was assisting with the threshing, threw a fork into the mow and struck young Messersmith near the crown of his head. Dr. J. Nelson Dunnick was summoned and rendered medical aid. If no unforeseen complications arise he will be able to be around shortly.

MAY SPEAK AT FAIR

There is a probability that James W. Gerard, who was ambassador to Germany until the outbreak of the war between the United States and that country, will visit York and make an address at the York county fair, October 8-11, for the York Liberty Loan campaign committee has sent him a special invitation. The committee believes that more good can be accomplished by his visit to smaller cities than to the larger cities, and that the average crowd at a county fair is the best sort of an audience to hear patriotic utterances from such a man.

STRUCK BY AUTO

Dr. K. L. Eisenhart was slightly injured Saturday evening at about 10:30 o'clock, by being struck by an automobile on the Wrightsville pike, in front of his country home. Dr. Eisenhart was descending from a trolley car just as an automobile driven by a man named Albright, with eight passengers, came down the road. Dazzled and confused by the glare of the automobile lights, Dr. Eisenhart stepped right in the course of the car. He was struck and knocked down. But apart from being slightly bruised and shaken, he escaped unhurt.

Prior to that he had been over the top five times. He told the Carlisle man that there were sixteen other Indians in his company, nine of them from the Carlisle school.

Air Plants.

In some parts of Mexico "air plants" abound. These curious growths are never attached to the soil in any way, but rely for their moisture on the atmosphere. One kind, known as "Spaniard's beard" (Tillandsia usneoides), attaches itself to telephone wires. Very often the growth becomes a positive nuisance, and it is necessary to send men to clear it away. The "Spaniard's beard" has no proper leaves, and in appearance is simply a mass of green-gray threads.—Wide World.

How Mosquitoes Hatch.

We have all heard about the mosquito's habit of laying its eggs on the surface of still water in the form of a raft, which floats about until hatching time arrives. But it is only some species that do that. In the Catskill region, and elsewhere among the mountains of the North and East, there is a kind of mosquito that deposits its eggs during July in dry hollows in the ground. When the following spring arrives the snows melting from the hills fill the hollows with water, and in May the eggs hatch out.

utmost importance and qualified help very scarce.

"July 4th was declared a legal holiday throughout France and she surely opened her hearts and doors to us. The decorations were as good and enthusiasm better than I have ever witnessed in the States. American flags everywhere and A-mer-i-que on every one's tongue. July 14th the Independence Day of France was also an occasion for celebration and a monster parade by troops from all the Allied nations was the chief attraction.

"We see the uniform of many nations on the streets and few men are seen in civilian dress. The Americans are very popular over here. The French, a likeable and courteous people, treat us with the utmost respect and do all in their power to make us comfortable and show their appreciation of our efforts in their behalf. They marvel at the vast resources of our country and at our capacity to do big things and do them quickly. They also realize and appreciate the wholehearted way we have entered this war and that we will be a big factor in the final outcome, namely the death knell to the Kaiser's hopes and ambitions.

"I understand the women at home are gradually taking our places and shouldering the burdens that the women over here have long since been doing. They run the trolleys, work in the shops and stores, and it is no unusual sight to see them driving huge trucks, taxi-cabs, and even cleaning the streets. The same was also noticeable through England and Scotland. I have seen many ancient and historical points in the different countries I have been in, events we once read about, and they were immensely interesting. France is many years behind us in progress, few things are modern, but everything is beautiful. Their taste runs to beauty and their ideas to pleasure, but they get a great deal more out of life than we do.

"We still have an occasional air raid and the long range gun continues to drop her offerings at our feet, but we go our respective ways, trusting that they drop elsewhere. Our boys are having a lively time at the front now and are giving a good account of themselves. I think by this time the Huns appreciate that we have something to back up our so called bluff. The progress for the past few weeks has been very encouraging and we are hoping for a continuation of same.

"The time passes very rapidly in this busy life we lead. I am already sporting a service stripe, having had six months of foreign service, but am not particularly anxious to start a collection of them. Am quite satisfied to come home with one.

"We have been helping out at night with the wounded coming into the stations as we are not very far from the centre of activities and a great many are brought in here to the hospitals. Have prospects of a few days trip to the French Alps as a little recreation from the continuous grind. It will be much appreciated and I think will result in better work in the future."

DIMMERS BLAMED

Thief Steals Tires from Wrecked Automobile.

As the result of an autoist failing to dim his lights, the small touring car of Eugene Miller, Berwick township, is a wreck and Mr. Miller is minus his tires. They were stolen from the wrecked car.

As the Miller machine was traveling toward Abbottstown after a trip to Hanover a large touring car with bright lights approached from the opposite direction. This caused the driver of the smaller car, Maurice Miller, a brother of the owner, to become blinded and his machine struck the curbing of a bridge over a culvert near Nace's school house. The machine was badly wrecked and could not be moved under its own power. None of the occupants, however, were injured.

Monday morning Mr. Miller went to the scene to take his machine for repairs. He found that somebody had stripped the tires off. Mrs. John Kinneman, who resides nearby, states that she saw a man working about the car early in the morning and she has furnished a good description of the man. The police have been notified of the theft.

COUNTRY UNIFIED; NO MORE HYPHENS

BAR ORGANIZATIONS OF FOREIGN BORN SUCH AS GERMANS MAINTAINED.

BORAH USES WEIGHTY WORDS

Providing Returned Soldiers With Land May Lead to Great Reclamation Projects—Fletcher's Experience With Waterway Shipments.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington.—The war may be worth everything it costs, because it will tend to unify the country. That is, it will make the "melting pot" a reality instead of a phrase. Never again will this country tolerate organizations of foreign-born citizens such as the Germans maintained up to the time of the entry of the United States into the great war. The hyphen will have to go. There will be no more German-Americans. It is rather curious that the hyphen was used almost wholly by people of German birth and parentage in this country and was for the purpose of showing their double allegiance, which in fact in many cases has proved to be a single allegiance, and that to the German empire.

One of the most striking speeches that has been heard in a long time was made by Senator Borah of Idaho at one of the semiweekly sessions of the senate. There were very few people to listen to him, but the speech was of such a character as to make a profound impression and to show the necessity of rooting out all sentiment of double allegiance if this country is to survive as a nation. Possibly the speech will be the foundation of stricter immigration laws, and also be the beginning of better provisions for amalgamating foreigners than has heretofore been adopted.

Already attention is being given to what we shall do with the soldiers when they come back from the great war. After every war in the past, with the exception of the Spanish-American war, the government has taken particular pains to help soldiers to obtain land. By land warrants, liberal homestead laws and other methods, soldiers of all the other wars were afforded an opportunity to secure tracts of land. But that was in the time when the whole country was developing; when there was a great West with unlimited lands. After this war the same conditions will not prevail unless the government should take up and consider seriously the question of reclaiming much land that can be utilized for farms. This can be done by draining nearly a hundred million acres of swamp lands which are very fertile, and irrigating millions upon millions of acres of fertile desett lands. This is a problem big enough for the greatest minds

The senate was talking about delays in shipment of freight and express and Senator Warren of Wyoming made this contribution: "I have just received a postal card making inquiry if I had received a lot of sausage sent from a point in Rhode Island on the 14th of January. Of course I had not received it. Yesterday I had to sign an affidavit before a notary about some shirts that I had ordered which were to be sent on the 1st of June and have not yet arrived. I learn from the West that the situation is confusion worse confounded. The congestion was bad enough before the government took hold of it, but in the particular cases that I am interested in it is worse than before."

According to Senator Fletcher of Florida, who is an authority on waterways, the freight problem would be greatly simplified and railroad congestion relieved if shippers could be made to realize that there is such a thing as transportation by water. The Florida senator recently told his colleagues of an experience he had in ordering a refrigerator from New York. When the sellers tried to send it to him by rail they were told that freight of this character was not being accepted. This advice was passed on to Senator Fletcher [illegible] inquiring if there was any reason why it could not be shipped by water to Norfolk, and then up the Potomac to Washington. Eventually the refrigerator was sent by water to Baltimore and from there by rail to Washington, in much less time and at half the cost required to railroad it direct from New York.

At one of the Thursday sessions of the senate the blind Senator Gore of Oklahoma entered the chamber escorted by a page, one of that corps of boys who act as messengers to members while the senate is in session. The Oklahoma senator sat down to hear what was going on, but it failed to interest him and he rose to go. Meanwhile his page had wandered off, so another one ran over to Gore and started to lead him out. Just then the first page hove into view. He bore down on the usurper and caught up just at the door, where Gore stopped for a moment. There in the middle of the main aisle, in front of the presiding officer, page No. 1 planted a well-placed kick on the person of No. 2, who at once fled, leaving the victor to lead the Oklahoma senator out as he had brought him in.

In Speaker Clark's room on one of the days when the house had a semi-weekly session of two or three minutes, a little clock tinkled off the hour of twelve. "It's time for you to go in and call the house to order," remarked a visitor to the speaker. "Yes," responded Champ, "and if you will wait half a second 15 different fellows will be poking their heads through that door telling me that it is time to call the house to order. If there is one thing that they are bent on more than another, it is to have the house called to order promptly at twelve o'clock."

Those who are interested in this subject are mostly employees, but the speaker does not have to give himself any particular uneasiness about getting in on time. Henry Neal, who has been the speaker's messenger ever since Sam Randall held the position more than 40 years ago, has seen to it every day the house was in session that the speaker was notified at twelve o'clock that it was time to call the house to order.

Congressman Glass of Virginia has two sons "over there." One is a captain in France and the other a lieutenant. Glass did not know where the boys were, particularly the younger. Lieut. Carter Glass, Jr., until one day he picked up one of the metropolitan papers that publishes war pictures of all kinds and there in the center of a group of American soldiers viewing some historic spot in England he saw Lieutenant Glass, and knew in what part of "over there" his son was at that particular time.

The bravest soldier in the United States army has been located. He is not in France; not in the trenches; not in the aviation or tank or machine gun corps, but right here in the national capital. All ranks of army men from privates to generals pass daily along Pennsylvania avenue, between Fifteenth and Seventeenth streets, on their way to and from the state, war and navy building, and other bureaus of the government. Well, this brave soldier was a lieutenant, and he had just turned the corner of Fifteenth street when a private walked up to him, saluted, and apparently asked a question. The lieutenant took a match out of his pocket, bent over and scratched it on his heel, and held it while the soldier lit a cigarette. Probably none of the generals or colonels happened to be near at the time.

Just to Ourselves.

It is hard to be really just to ourselves. A great many of us are more lenient with our own faults than with those of other people, while not a few censure themselves far more harshly for a false step than they would think of censuring another. What we should strive for is to be neither too exacting not too lenient where our shortcomings are concerned, but to give ourselves the benefit of simple justice.

For Fever Patient.

Here is a cooling drink for fever patients: Put a little sage, two sprigs of balm and a little sorrel into a stone jug, having first washed and dried it. Peel thin a small lemon, slice it and put a small piece of the peel in; then pour in three pints of boiling water. Sweeten and cover it closely.

ITALIANS FLEE AUSTRIAN CAMP

Eight Make Their Escape After Untold Suffering.

TELL HORROR OF PRISON LIFE

Food Scant and of Poorest Quality—Prisoners Forced to Help Flay Their Comrades—Escaping Italians Make Their Way to Russia After Undergoing Great Hardships and Are Given Warm Welcome.

In the little hamlet of Saliceta San Giuliano, province of Emilia, Italy, lives a shoemaker, Luigi Ghittoni, in a modest home. He has four sons in the army. Two are now at the front, and two were captured by the Austrians.

One evening recently the door was burst open roughly, and the shoemaker cried out in alarm: "Who is there?"

"It is I, Edward, your son," came the answer. "I have escaped from Austria."

At the sound of a loved one's voice, the little home was thrown topsy-turvy, and the good news flew in a moment around the town. What a gathering there was of friends, relatives and family for welcoming him to the home!

Edward still bore on his face traces of his hardships in captivity, and after his escape. He is thirty. He had fought in Libya in the famous Italian-African campaign. As soon as Italy declared war in 1915, he hastened to the front and took part in several engagements, but July 20 he was captured on San Michael, and for 31 months remained a prisoner of the Austrians. He was taken to Lubiana where he remained for six days and was sent to Mathausen. There he remained till September, 1916.

Prisoners Flogged Piteously.

"Our life was a hard one," he said; "the suffering was great; the food scant and of the poorest quality; the beatings with rods frequent and without pity. Among so many tortures what racked the boys most was to be compelled by force to help flay their comrades tied to a stake. This cruelty was abolished, however, after the death of Francis Joseph."

The opportunity to escape came, however, and young Ghittoni proved equal to the emergency. In September he was sent with a batch of other prisoners to Hungary, Dommavater in the Carpathians being their destination.

"We were divided into squads of 250," he continued, "each assigned to cut down trees, which were to be used in fortifications. Our treatment did not improve, and the work was made harder every day. Blows were struck if anyone refused to work, or let up for any reason. I received my full share with the rest. Only one thing bore us up, and that was the hope of escape. In spite of all the difficulties we decided to regain our liberty at whatever cost. We were able to get some Austrian uniforms and accumulate supplies. After that we awaited our opportunity.

"Two of our companions, however," Ghittoni continued, "became impatient, and leaped over the stockade last January. They were discovered immediately, shot by sentinels when they refused to halt, and returned to captivity. What became of them? We knew nothing after that.

"Eight of us resolved to get away. We were divided into two squads. A few days later the first succeeded in getting over the stockade, and we lost trace of each other for the moment. No alarm was given by the Austrians; so we concluded that their getaway had been successful.

"A week later in the night the second squad leaped over the stockade and made for the fastnesses of the Carpathian mountains. A few miles beyond we came to a railway station.

Warmly Greeted by Russians.

"A train was about to start for the Russian border. We climbed on board. A Hungarian trainman ogled us at first. Then he got drowsy. The train covered 55 kilometers and stopped. We got off. Two by two we took different ways to escape the notice of the sentinels. We asked the way to the Russian border with the utmost caution. After long drudgery we were able to get a bite to eat. For five days we dragged ourselves along, half starved, without a sign of encouragement. We passed through six barbed wire entanglements. We dropped finally to a little path covered with snow.

"At last we came upon a military post. It happened to be the first Russian outpost of a covered battery.

We were received as friends, and were supplied with bountiful rations. The Russians completed our joy by reuniting us with the four companions who had escaped a week before us. We were enabled through the assistance of the French military mission to get back to Italy."

ACTS AMAZE ITALIANS

Yankee Flyers Credited With Great Heroism.

Exploits Quickly Win Honors Given by King Victor Emmanuel Himself.

Italian Army Headquarters.—The Italian commandant under whose direction the American flyers are working on the Italian front has only one fault to find with them. They never want to remain on the ground.

The exploits which brought five of the American airmen decorations cannot yet be published, but the value of their services may be judged from the fact that King Victor Emmanuel traveled to the section held by the Americans to make the presentation.

A few days ago Lieut. Alexander C. Craig of New York, while flying over Austrian territory, was attacked by a chaser plane. By skillfully handling his own machine, after a few minutes of jockeying he put his adversary at a disadvantage and maneuvered his own gunner into such a position that a burst of machine gunfire shot the attacker dead and sent his plane to the ground in flames.

Lieut. Harry L. Holtz of Burley, Idaho, showed he could combine great coolness in danger with a thorough understanding of Italian habits and customs. On his way back over the Austrian lines after a deep raid into enemy territory his plane was struck by a burst of shrapnel from anti-aircraft guns. One fragment lodged in the body of Holtz's machine, another tore a hole in the right wing, while a third splintered one of the left-wing spars, at the same time cutting one of the aileron control cables to such an extent that a single strand of steel wire was left.

Lieutenant Holtz calmly pointed out the break to the Italian mechanic accompanying him. The mechanic, without a moment's hesitation, climbed out and fought his way to the wing against a tremendous wind pressure. Then, lying flat on his face and bracing his feet against the strut, he grasped the damaged cable with one hand on each side of the break.

Just when he was getting a grip on the last strand of the cable it parted and the value of his daring action was apparent. With the cable gone, the big airplane virtually was useless, but he coolly clung there, substituting his strength for it and enabling Lieutenant Holtz to bring the machine safely into Italian territory.

NO GRUMBLING AT PRIVATION

Britishers Willing to Subsist on Short Rations if That Will Help Win the War for Liberty.

It really isn't necessary to tell the British people not to waste food. There is nothing eatable left on the average plate when the meal is finished. Meals are one interminable round of fish and eggs, fish and eggs. Eggs are found disguised under all manner of names, but always there are eggs, not seven times a week, but almost 21 times a week, writes Chester M. Wright, member of the American Federation of Labor mission to England.

Meat is rationed by a card system. So is sugar, of which you may have six ounces a week and no more. One of the best hotels in London is serving butter or margarine only once daily. Many hotels have none for days at a time.

Desserts are a thing of the past, recorded in history but not among the things extant. Milk is rationed Tea soon will be. Bread is rationed Hotels will serve you with one brown roll per meal. The average man would be amazed at the British menu today, but the British do not grumble. They go on short rations knowing that it must be done, and accept it as part of the war that must be carried victorywards.

Even if it were possible to break the food restrictions the average Britisher has not the slightest desire to get more to eat than his neighbors. Especially among the British workers is there an obvious grim satisfaction when members of the American labor mission and speakers tell how ships are being rushed to completion in 26 states, and how self-denial by the British people in matters of food and luxuries make each ton of maximum value and effect in prosecuting the war to a finish.

The British workers realize that more than half their food comes from the United States.

"The less food the more troops," is the slogan which appeals especially to the Clyde ship builders, one of whom said: "If ships from the United States are laden as far as possible with soldiers and ammunition, then every bolt we drive is as good as a rifle shot against the Germans."

FINDS VOLUNTEER WHEAT

Farmer Declares It Was Growing in a Crop of Alfalfa.

William Kranz, a farmer near Jeffersonville, Ind., has seven acres of alfalfa and on 16 acres he is grazing with it, but in the same field there is growing a fine stand of volunteer wheat. It is better in condition and appearance than many fields of wheat which were sown last year, but failed to produce good crops. Mr. Kranz says he would have two good crops if he could separate them. Near by, James B. Green has 94 acres in alfalfa and on 16 acres he is grazing 230 hogs which are unable to keep down the growth. He has cut two tons of hay from this field as well.

"Triumph" Was Worth Earning.

The "triumph," the highest military honor known to the Romans, was not lightly given. The victor must have attained certain rank, and have met certain conditions of war. Granted these conditions, the streets were dressed with garlands, and amid applauding crowds drove the general, seated in a chariot. "Why America Fights"

Lecture by CARLTON CHAMBERLAYNE

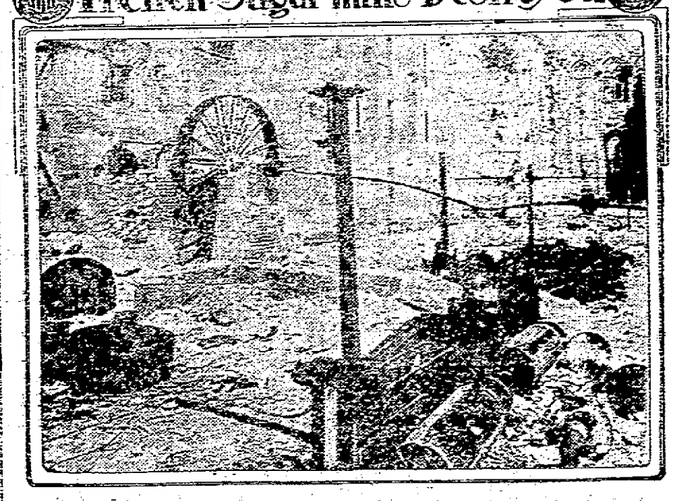
LAST NIGHT AT CHAUTAUQUA

Carlton Chamberlayne, one-time associate editor of the Schenectady Union-Star, resigned in order to take up Y. M. C. A. work in the national army camps and cantonments in the vicinity of San Antonio, Texas. Mr. Chamberlayne, whose heart and soul have been in the efforts of Uncle Sam in his endeavor to "make the world safe for democracy" ever since the President announced it as the purpose of this country, will be a valuable addition to the Chautauqua program.

Carlton Chamberlayne is one of the best known residents of Schenectady. In later years he has been recognized everywhere as one of the best lecturers on the public platform and his talents in that direction have been in great demand. His Chautauqua work has earned for him much commendation from the press wherever he has appeared.

Mr. Chamberlayne, during his connection with the Union-Star, found time to participate in the various movements launched by the United States for war purposes. He has spoken a score of times in the interest of enlistments for the navy, the first and second Liberty Loan, the War Thrift Stamps, and other forms of service. His lecture, "Why America Fights," will be among the best on Chautauqua.

French Sugar Mills Destroyed



France must import sugar today, most of it from this side of the ocean, because the largest portion of French sugar beet land is in German hands. As a result, the French people have been placed on a sugar ration of about 18 pounds a year for domestic use; a pound and a half a month. This photograph shows how the German troops destroyed French sugar mills. Thanks to the French rationing system the annual consumption has been cut to 600,000 tons, according to reports reaching the United States Food Administration. Before the war France had an average sugar crop of about 750,000 tons of sugar and had some left over for export.

CZAR DRUGGED TO AID KAISER

Russian Court Lady Gives Some Inside Facts.

QUACK BRIBED BY BERLIN

Royal Pair Warned of Their Danger Weeks Before Revolution Started—Czar Under Influence of Thibetan Drug When He Signed Abdication—Administered by Man in Pay of German Government.

From a Russian of high birth who was a lady-in-waiting to the czarina of Russia, are learned some particulars of the events which immediately preceded and followed the czar's abdication which are not generally known. The woman lost all she possessed in the upheaval of Russia and is now connected with the American Red Cross. The czarina banished her from court before the revolution because her husband, who was in the diplomatic service, had incurred the imperial displeasure.

The lady in question says that the czar and czarina were warned of their danger some weeks before the revolution started. In particular did Princess Vasiltchioff, a member of the imperial court, and wife of a prominent member of the council of the empire, warn her. The princess is a good Russian patriot, and, like many others, was appalled at the signs of coming anarchy.

So much alarmed was she that she wrote a personal letter to the czarina, telling her that if she wished to save Russia and her own family she must dismiss Rasputin and the Germans at court and see that the army had ammunition.

Advice Enraged Czarina.

She wrote this in Russian, which was against Russian court etiquette (which admitted only French), and on single sheets torn from a writing block instead of on double paper—another crime against etiquette.

Two more crimes were that she addressed the letter to "Her Majesty," instead of to "Her Imperial Highness," and posted it in Petrograd in the ordinary way instead of sending it through Baron Fredericks, the court minister, a sort of high priest for the observance of etiquette, an old man of recent German extraction, but a very decent kind of person all the same.

In due time the czarina received and read the letter. She was furious—furious because so many rules of etiquette had been broken, and still more furious because the writer dared tell her that she and her husband were unpopular and were losing Russia.

"I shall never have any of the Russian aristocracy to court again," she cried angrily. "I always hated them. I love only the poor people and the soldiers. At my next ball I shall have none but poor people and soldiers. The soldiers adore me."

She had this entirely false idea of the soldiers' devotion, because people about the court used to "fake" grateful letters to her from imaginary soldiers. Thus, while the troops were already cursing the imperial pair and vowing revenge for all their sufferings, for all the shortage of ammunition and for often being sent to be butchered just because a general needed a decoration, but had no artillery to cover his attack, the czarina was saying she "adored" soldiers and would fill her ballroom with them.

She not only banished the princess from court, but ordered that she and her husband be exiled to Siberia. And Prince and Princess Vasiltchikoff would have gone to Siberia on foot in the depth of winter but for Baron Fredericks, who managed to get the sentence softened to exile to the prince's estate in the heart of Russia. They were kept prisoners on their estate till the revolution started a couple of months later.

The incident shows how blind the imperial family were till the last minute, and how the czarina, a German by birth, had imbibed the autocrat traditions of Catherine the Great and Ivan the Terrible.

Drugged by Kaiser's Order.

The same information said that the czar was suffering from the effects of a terrible Thibetan drug when he signed his abdication.

"Everybody at the court knew it," the princess said. "He signed his own abdication and his son's without a murmur, and we all knew him for an obstinate man. For days afterward he was still in a state of stupor. Only when he came to himself did he realize what he had done. Then it was too late. But his despair was terrible."

"Who drugged him?" was asked.

"A quack from Thibet, who had risen to be the most influential person at court after Rasputin's death," she answered. "He was a friend of Rasputin and of Mlle. Veroubha, who had unbounded influence over the czarina. And the quack was paid by the kaiser to drug the czar.

"Every one in Petrograd knows very well that the czar would never have signed a separate peace with Germany. He was not a clever man, and had allowed all kinds of abuses to arise in the government, but he was a man of honor. The kaiser knew he had to get rid of him. And the kaiser fostered the revolution and had the czar drugged to hasten the anarchy that has ruined Russia."

SWISS AID BEE CULTURE

Sixteen Pounds of Sugar Allotted to Each Hive.

The bees will be looked after next fall by the Swiss government, says a communications published by the military department. Each bee master will receive 16 pounds of sugar for each beehive.

It is expected that this amount will be enough to keep the bees until spring. Owners of bees who desire to receive sugar rations will have to make their application before the end of this month.

BRITISH RESCUED BY YANK AVIATORS

Save Crew of Seaplane Forced Down in Fight With Five Foe Flyers.

The feat of two American aviators in rescuing the crew of a British seaplane which had been forced to land on the surface of the North sea after an encounter with a group of German airplanes, received mention in a British communique. The official statement, however, said only:

"In one case a stray bullet shot away a control, and the British machine was forced to alight. The crew were subsequently rescued by another British seaplane which had been sent to search for them."

The rescuing machine was manned by Ensigns Benjamin Lee and J. J. Schieffelin of the American naval aviation service. Ensign Lee gave the Associated Press the following account of the flight:

"Our commanding officer and two men left the station at 3:30 in the morning on a flight toward the Dutch coast. Shortly after sunrise they saw on the horizon five spots which rapidly assumed the outlines of German seaplanes.

"Five to one is hardly a fight, so the commanding officer, after a first diving charge through the enemy's formation, shoved down the nose of his plane and headed homeward. His two men fired sharply from the after guns, forcing the German scouts to keep their distance. They were getting away all right, even leading the enemy into dangerous territory, when suddenly a chance shot from one of the Germans took away a control and the flying boat crashed nose down. The three men fought clear of the wreckage and got hold of a floating spar, while the Germans, realizing that they were in dangerous country, scooted away homeward.

"It was four hours later, when the patrol was long overdue, that we were sent out to search for them. We searched the horizon as we speeded along eastward, covering, at the visibility, a band about twenty miles wide. Finally one of us picked up a black speck, which soon grew into a piece of wreckage with three men on it.

"Dropping our bombs at a safe distance, we throttled down our motors and landed near the crashed seaplane. It was a delicate operation, but we managed to taxi over to the wreckage and pick off the four men, meanwhile sending back the good news by wireless.

"The only comment the commanding officer had to make on his experience was: 'What's a duckling? Just a bit of experience!'"

All France at War.

"If you want to see a whole nation in arms, go to France," says a hearty, good looking United States soldier boy just back from the war front, and now in a hospital. "It's not just in the cities. It's in the little country towns. I've seen old women at work in the fields, women so feeble that they had to walk with a cane when they weren't working. I've seen an old French mother wheeling fertilizer up to the top of the hill. She had to do the work because her men folks were in the trenches. After every trip up hill she came tottering down, and you might have thought she couldn't wheel another load. She did, though. I tell you, the spirit of those French people is the wonder of this war."

Where He Stopped.

"Mr. Bliggins speaks four or five languages," remarked Miss Cayenne.

"Valuable accomplishment."

"It would be if he could think up something worth saying in any one of them."

Optimistic Thought.

No gain is so certain as that which is saved from the economical use of what we have.

MIGHTY POOR MATINEE IDOLS

But Can They Fight? Oh, Boy, You Can't Stop Them—Ask the Major, He Knows—Also About the Marines.

By RICHARD HENRY LITTLE.
(Chicago Newspaper Man, Now in Y. M. C. A. Service on Atlantic.)

New York.—American soldiers are grand fighters but very poor matinee idols. When women spring from their seats in the sidewalk cafes in Paris and thrust flowers in their hands, they look as ashamed as a dog caught stealing eggs.

The most awful suffering I saw in Paris was the case of a big husky from an infantry outfit. A lady of great distinction had stopped her machine in the middle of the street while the soldier was crossing, and, leaning out, had enthusiastically tied a bright pink ribbon around his neck. Amidst much rejoicing from the assembled French spectators the lady went her way and the big soldier looked as if he was just about to choke to death, although it was a very thin ribbon and loosely tied. I saw him an hour later and he still wore the ribbon and had turned deathly pale and was evidently in terrible pain.

The Captain's Orders.

"Listen," said the infantry husky in a hoarse whisper, "the captain said we was to receive any compliments given us by the French with a smile and show 'em we appreciated it and not hurt their feelings by ditching it, but if I have to wear this pink ribbon around me neck for another hour I'll go nuts and bite myself in the leg. For the love of Mike do something."

I removed the ribbon from the suffering soldier's neck and after a while he grew calm and quite rational and he told me some stories of the front regarding the first assault of the Americans against Chateau Thierry.

"They can't hold us guys," he said, "when we git started we jest keep goin'. All anybody says is jest kill 'em, kill 'em, and O boy, you ought to see our lads go to it!

"There at Chatty Teery the officers were making an awful holler about the boys running too fast and ducking right through the barrage and not paying attention to nothing except spearin' Boches. Our colonel came over before we started and he was much particular-like in pointing out a bunch of rocks where he wanted our battalion to halt.

"The major said all right, that he would stop his four companies right on the line of them rocks, and then we started. We got it right in the nose, from every Dutch gun in front of us, but the boys jest yelled and laughed and away they went. Say, they didn't pay no more attention to the major when we came to them rocks than if he hadn't been there at all.

"I went back to give him a message from my captain and he was standing by the rocks and up came the colonel and the colonel gave the major blinking hell for not stopping the battalion where he said, and the major was madder 'n a hornet, and he double damned the colonel right back again and he said: 'How the crucified damnation could I stop them crazy, wild-eyed sons of perdition? If that hog-faced crown prince and his whole damnety damn Dutch army couldn't stop 'em, what the h—— could I do?'"

And Those Marines.

I asked him if the marines were good fighters

"Good fighters?" the soldier said; "say, every time I see a marine I want to go up and give him a kiss.

"If they ever get started again they will never stop till they get to Berlin. Now, you listen to me. I know. Say, do you know what I saw them marines do?

"They had taken three trenches and was stopping in the third to fill their pockets with grenades and bombs before tackling the next trench that was chuck-full of Boches. The Dutch was using mustard gas and we was all wearing our masks. The grenades wuz passed around.

"The marines filled their pockets and hung 'em on their belts and then they seemed to decide that they needed more for the job than what they had, so what did those crazy nuts do but whip off their gas masks and fill 'em up with grenades and then, carrying their masks like they was market baskets, up they jumped and down they comes on the Dutch in the next trench all spraddled out, and they bombed 'em till there wasn't nothing but jest grease spots left.

"Oh, you marines, boys, my hat is certainly off to you."

And likewise you infantry and you artillery.

"Behind the Clouds"

By STELLA WOLEJKO

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"I saw Mr. Arnold in the car this morning," said Ethel Hill to her sister, Ruth.

"Is that so? Did he look at you?" questioned the sister.

"Why, yes! he looked across the aisle in the car and seemed to smile, and if my eyesight is not deceiving me, he actually smiled to me," said Ethel.

This Mr. Arnold was a perfect stranger to the girls, who had been new arrivals in the little town of Auburn. The girls had seen him occasionally on the cars and took special notice of him because he resembled a gentleman of their acquaintance.

"I wish I knew some way of making his acquaintance," said Ethel. "I'm sure he must be a respectable gentleman and worth knowing."

"So do I," responded Ruth. "Time might clear the matter."

Time passed for the Hills. They had been living in Auburn for a year now still meeting the strange Mr. Arnold and still lacking a much desired introduction. They made friends very readily with the girls in the neighborhood but never chanced upon anyone who was acquainted with Mr. Arnold.

Finally there came a day when Ethel and Ruth were invited to a community picnic to be held in the woods surrounding their town. They anticipated a great deal of pleasure and the meeting of many people of their town.

Dressed in their freshly starched summer linens, with lunch baskets in hand, the two girls marched along to the woods where some of the other girls were to await them.

They were enjoying themselves immensely at the picnic, making new acquaintances, when a new face appeared. It was that of a pretty, blooming young woman with sparkling dark eyes and glossy black hair.

"There comes Mrs. Atherton," echoed the girls. "She's jolly good company. Now our fun will start."

Ethel and Ruth were delighted with the new acquaintance. They found that she was a very close neighbor to them, living on the next street, which was very pleasing to them.

"Mr. Atherton will be here immediately," announced Mrs. Atherton. "He was detained in fixing the car up for his brother, but told me to go along so as not to keep you waiting."

Just as she finished her statement the eyes of Ruth Hill turned to the entrance of the woods, where she spied the figure of their Mr. Arnold approaching.

"Look," she uttered as she gave her sister Ethel a push, "see who's coming!"

"Why, there's Dick, now," said Mrs Atherton, turning towards the same direction as the Hill girls were looking.

With downcast eyes Ethel and Ruth acknowledged the introduction to Mr Atherton, thinking what a disappointment it was that he couldn't be Mr Arnold in their imagination any more

They did their best to keep up their spirit the rest of the day, but failed slightly and went home before the rest.

Next day Ethel was not waiting with the same expectation to see if their Mr Arnold would come to take the same car with her. Nevertheless, he advanced up the street. Ethel thought she would do her best to be pleasant for even though he was somebody's husband, he was a gentleman just the same.

She thought it proper for a girl to speak to a gentleman first; therefore, when he neared her, she said:

"Good morning, Mr. Atherton; how did the picnic end? We didn't stay till the end, as we were anxious to get home early."

"Good morning," he answered. "I'm sorry that I missed the picnic. My brother was present with his wife, but I was called away on business."

Ethel uttered an exclamation of surprise.

"I beg your pardon, sir," she said. "I thought that you were Mr. Atherton whom I had met at the picnic with his wife."

"So I am Mr. Atherton, but I happen to be brother to the Mr. Atherton whose wife you met," he replied. "Now that you've spoken to me, won't you please continue recognizing me. I've always longed to know you."

Ethel was undecided whether it was proper to speak to him hereafter or not, but being very much excited over the mistake, she announced to him that she was Miss Hill, and told him how she had always connected him with a gentleman she knew, which made him smile.

"Well, isn't this lucky? Now the ride into the city every day won't tire me as it used to," he assured her.

"Ruth! What do you think?" cried Ethel as she rushed into the house that night. "Why! I've met the very Mr. Arnold we wanted to meet, and he's the brother of the Mr. Atherton we met at the picnic. Only this one is not married. He's just like his brother in looks and actions. Now I thought the Mr. Atherton at the picnic acted kind of unnatural and a little different. I thought it was the surprise of seeing me there that accounted for it."

Two years elapsed. Some one going by and seeing the church in Auburn open inquired what was going on inside. His curiosity was satisfied when he was informed that it was the wedding day of Ethel Hill to Ray Atherton, the most popular people in town.

Counter Question.

She—"How do I know you are not marrying me for my money?" He—"If it comes to that, how do I know you are not marrying me to reform me?"—Boston Transcript.

Two of our young men graduates have just reported promotions which carry with them salaries of $2300.00 and $3300.00 a year. These young people earn every two weeks more than their tuition cost them.

DON'T PUT IT OFF ANY LONGER, but decide to take up the work at once. Write, phone, or call to make arrangements for your course.

ATTENDING TO CHICKENS AND GARDEN

"My neighbors are surprised to see me looking so well, for they thought I would not live to see summer. I had such pain around my heart as to cause me to faint. I knew it came from bloating and pressure of gas in my stomach. A friend in St. Louis told me to use Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and I now feel better than in all my life. I am doing my own work, attending to my chickens and my garden and have cleased house." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded.
